from persons interested in the re-enactment of reciprocity laws continue to be received by the sub-committee of the ways and means committee on reelprocity and commercial treaties. A mmunication from the National Association of Farmers signed by its sident, T. C. Search, of Philadelphia, is considered by the sub-committee one of the most important that Collseum Albert Ewing and Archie Clark has yet come to hand. Speaking for the interests represented by this association, Mr. Search says he desires the interests represented by this association, Mr. Search says he desires to present arguments bearing upon the ADVANTAGES OF RECIPROCITY

as a general principle in international "My view of this matter," he says,

"My view of this matter, he says,
"is taken from a purely business standpoint, without regard to any political considerations, for there is probably no feature of our tariff system, past or present, that has come so near as represent, that has come so hear as re-ciprocity to being a purely business matter. To this fact may be attribut-ed the enthusiastic support which the principles of reciprocity have received from men of widely differing political

He refers to what he regards were the benefits derived from the act of 1850, and says that it requires but a glance at the conditions under which the treaties of commercial reciprocity ore negotiated to reveal how much ras gained by this country, and how ittle was given in return. The vary-with Brazil under the treaty and after its repeal are cited.

"It is in our dealings with Cuba, however," says Professor Search, "that the benefits of reciprocity have been most strikingly shown, Sugar, which formed the largest them in our imports from Cuba, was placed upon the free list conditionally upon the reasonable treatment of American products in list conditionally upon the reasonable treatment of American products in those countries from which sugar was imported into the United States. Under normal trade conditions, Cuba would have looked to the United States for her supply of breadstuffs, etc., but in order to control the trade of her West India colonies, Spain imposed a duty of nearly $5.50 per barrel upon American flour. Under the reciprocity treaty which Secretary Elaine negotiated with Spain, the tunder three years of reciprocity, it is tated, our trade with Cuba reached the highest point ever touched, showing an increase of $8,000,000 in exports and $14,000,000 in Imports. Upon the passage of the customs law of 1894, which compelled the abrogation of this treaty. Spain immediately retalisted by increasing the duty on flour to $4.75 per

Mr. Search argues that reciprocity commends itself as a sound and judicial business principle; that it should be considered upon a strictly non-partisan political basis; that practical application demonstrated the ability of reciprocity treaties to extend and enlarge our foreign trade under exceedingly favorable conditions; that they large our foreign trade under exceedingly favorable conditions; that they rendered valuable service in effecting more cordial relations between the United States and other nations; that reciprocity treaties, particularly with Latin-American countries, are necessary as a matter of self-protection, for treaties of this character are being or have been negotiated between European governments and the South ing devil, whose poverty needed no

The first thing that a guest at the group of Marking looks No. 22 The first thing that a guest at the anniversary of Mystic lodge No. 22 saw when he entered the portals of the lodge room last Monday night was their celebrated goat, which raised a smile and sundry jokes. It was the second birthday of the lodge, and as at the chairman, Dr. E. V. Silver, stated in his address of welcome, while they were passing from babyhood, they had, during their first year of life, proved themselves a lusty youngster among the lodges of Odd Fellows, indeed, "Tenfant terrible." Listening to the cordial greetings from the doctor was an audience of about 560, composed of the members of the lodges, their relatives and friends, together with several representative Odd Fellows of the side. Odd Fellows' temple.

Without doubt the event that called out the most enthusiasm, and which did not appear in the list of good things, was the presentation to Pass Grand Fred A. Rowe of an elegant past grand's collar. Since the formation of the lodge the worthy brother has been constant and assiduous in his labor of love in making No. 22 what is today one of the best bodies of Odd Fellows in the state, and in his address to the recipient of the well-carned compliment. Brother Charles A. Short made so mislakes in eulogizing Brother Rowe in the excellent vice that puzzles, confuses and frequently baffles their enemies of the white persuasion. They cut down trees about seven feet from the ground and burn the stumps till they are well charred and blackened. Behind these they station themselves, and the resemblance between them and the stakes is so striking that an Italian rifleman is likely to waste all his cartridges on the latter in the belief that he is shooting at the former.
